You Have The Right To Learn

- You have the right to learn at your own level.
- You have the right to be involved in deciding what you learn.
- You have a right to be patient with yourself.
- You have a right not to compare yourself to anyone else.
- You have a right to try again and again if that’s what it takes.
- You have a right to be discouraged sometimes. Learning is hard work.
- You have a right to achieve your goals.
- You have a right not to be embarrassed.
- You have a right to ask why, if you are not getting what you want from the learning process.
- The point of these Learner’s Rights is that you have the right to learn something new. Fast or slow, tomorrow or next year, if you keep steadfast and strong with your eye fixed on the prize, you will succeed.
